Dear Bill,

I have been tempted to waste more of your holidays and stay a longer time with you but I realised that we would have inevitably talked shop more than it should be done on holidays. Let me hope to be able to spend some time with you at London, in your laboratory. It can only be a matter of days, as I cannot hope to leave here for longer periods; but I hope that it will materialize, if I shall manage to come to England before next summer.

I am enclosing table 2. I hope it will be comprehensible.

I think you have contributed more than anybody else to the interest of the symposium, and therefore let me thank you for it, officially. Personally, I am indebted to you for several reasons. It has been exceedingly nice to see you and Mrs. Hayes again at Pallanza, and I hope that the last days of your holiday have been satisfactory. I was pleased to see you had such a nice weather this morning.

With best greetings also from my wife,
Yours
